

Cynthia Keyton, Clinical Oncology Manager at Karmanos Cancer Institute at McLaren Greater Lansing discovered the Women's Giving Circle by word of mouth. She decided to join when she saw via the website, the strong female community leaders involved.

Cynthia said she likes “the interaction and intellectual conversations with other women making a positive impact in our community. Also, the presentations that expand my knowledge, with topics covering current events and women's health.”

She continues to support because seeing amazing women contribute their ideas and their generous monetary donations makes her feel empowered and wanting to give back to others. She added, “it truly takes a village and when you see the outcome on how it benefits patients, it is rewarding. I have two young girls, and I share these wonderful experiences and hope that one day they will be leaders in any setting.”

“Enjoy the little things, for one day you may look back and realize they were the big things.” - Robert Brault
