

Jess Farhat, NP-C, MSN and owner of Nectar Body, Face, Skin joined the Women's Giving Circle because she believes deeply in women supporting women, especially in healthcare. "As a dermatology trained Nurse Practitioner and small business owner in our community, I see firsthand how much stronger we are when we pool our resources, ideas, and our compassion together. The Circle felt like an impactful group and a natural extension of the work I care about: advocacy, impact and community health." said, Jess.

Jess feels that there's something really special about being in a room full of smart, generous and intentional women who are all showing up with a common mission, to make a difference. She loves the energy of the meetings; and added that they are collaborative, effective and grounded in purpose. She commented "It's rare to find a group where you feel inspired every single time you get together."

She continues to support the WGC because it builds community. The group's contributions support access to care, women's health and programs that truly move the needle for people in our region. Giving back to the community that supports her medspa, team and family is incredibly important to her.
